Care and Maintenance

Your new floor will remain beautiful as long as proper care and maintenance is observed. Here are some helpful tips:

Moisture and direct Sunlight Control

Because hardwood and wood fiber based flooring is a living material, it will expand and contract with changes in moisture conditions. Wood floors will expand during hot and humid summer months. The use of a dehumidifier is recommended during summer. Air conditioning is also recommended to help remove the moisture from the air.

Wood floors will contract during the dry, winter season. Gaps may develop between boards. The use of a humidifier is recommended during the winter.

A consistent relative humidity level of 30-55% is ideal and recommended. Not only is the level ideal for your hardwood, but also for your health.

Prevent Unnecessary Exposure to Moisture

Floor mats should be checked thoroughly to ensure no moisture is trapped underneath. Windows and doors should be closed during rainy weather and wall or roof leaks must be corrected immediately.

Direct Sunlight

Exposing wood floors, particularly dark wood or exotic species, to direct sunlight may cause changes in colour overtime. Drapes or other window coverings to block direct sunlight will help minimize this.
